COUNCILMEN OPPOSE LEAGUE AND TELL WHY

Non-Partisan Organization of Charleroi is Handed Body Blow

STATEMENT PREPARED

Short Meeting This Morning Terminates in Declaration Being Made

Deeming that the recently formed Non-Partisan League of Charleroi has in a way cast reflection upon their actions and faithfulness as borough councilmen, and considering that in the same way the services of borough officials have been depreciated, councilmen this morning at a meeting of councilmen adopted a resolution endorsing a statement prepared in their own defense at their suggestion by President W. R. Gaut. The statement read to the body by Mr. Gaut showed wherein opposition lies to the Non-Partisan League. The statement as read follows:

"I take the present opportunity to express my disapproval and resentment of the unjust rejection made within the past week upon the competency and honesty of all our borough officials. This rejection was made by the 'Non-Partisan League of Charleroi, Pa.' an organization formed recently for the purpose—as it is alleged—of electing honest and competent borough officers. This allegation implies strongly that all the present borough officials are dishonest and incompetent. This serious reflection on the character of each and every officer of this borough was given to the press and through it was sent broadcast throughout the country.

"I as a citizen of Charleroi resent this unjust and unrighteous reflection upon our splendid upright and efficient burgess, who for the past four years has served this borough so efficiently and honestly that instead of seeking to place a blot on his character our citizens should be a unit in proclaiming their pride in his excellent upright and businesslike administration. Our schools are the equal of any others within our state and Pennsylvania prides herself on her good schools. That we have such spirit and schools is due to the board, careful and honest work of our school directors and I protest against the implication of inefficiency and dishonesty made against these good, moral, efficient and upright citizens.

"I am now serving my fourth year in council and I emphatically represent the reflection on my competency and honesty. I have always advocated improvement consistent with our resources. I have at all times advocated good order and the strict enforcement of all our laws and ordinances governing morality and right living. I resent this ruthless implied defamation of the character of my fellow councilmen. They are men of good character honesty and ability and in no way are they deserving of this unjust implied censure.

"Charleroi since its inception has been remarkably free from graft and dishonesty in its officials and I see no need of a non-partisan movement that heralds throughout the land the neces-

Hundreds Go From Charleroi Vicinity for Bentleyville Gathering

Hundreds from Charleroi and vicinity attended campmeeting at Bentleyville Sunday morning. They went out by train, automobile buggy and pack. Special accommodations are being provided for visitors from along the Monongahela valley by the railroad and by automobilists.

PROHIBS WANT ON BALLOT

State Chairman Says They are Going to Ask for Rights

SEEK PRIMARY VOTE

Chairman Burton L. Rockwood of the Prohibition State committee, declared at Harrisburg Saturday that the Prohibition party would name its own county tickets in every county of the state and would paddle its own canoe in the campaign. The chairman left for northeastern counties, where he will meet local leaders and arrange the details of filing papers.

Mr. Rockwood said that the Prohibition party was entitled to have ballots printed and that it would insist upon its rights from county commissioners. "There is no doubt about our right to the use of ballots and I have instructed our people in several counties where the question has been raised to take the matter before the courts if necessary," said he. It is understood that in Lackawanna county the right to ballots was questioned and the chairman of the county committee will fight the commissioners if they refuse to print.

The state chairman said that the party would have its candidates for state committee and other offices to be filed this fall and was preparing to figure actively in the gubernatorial campaign next year.

IS CANDIDATE FOR RE-ELECTION

J. W. Mathias Presents His Name as Candidate for Tax Collector

J. W. Mathias the present tax collector for the borough of Charleroi, today is making his announcement as a candidate, for re-election to the office, subject to Republican rules. Mr. Mathias is a man who has been a citizen of Charleroi for 19 years, coming here when the Macbeth-Evans plant was first started. He has been during much of his residence here a heavy taxpayer, and has always been a man much interested in the welfare of the town. As tax collector Mr. Mathias has made a painstaking official, which his friends argue is reason for his continuance in office. He is a substantial citizen and one who knows his business in the office of tax collector, besides having the value of a one-term experience in the office.

The Webster Cornet band was on the scene and rendered a number of classical and popular musical selections. On a large field a sham battle between companies of the Belle Vernon Rifles took place. Pittsburg Railways Company Host to Newspaper Men

TOUR TWO BRANCHES

Members of the Monongahela Valley Press association, and newspaper men from inter-county points had their annual outing Saturday as guests of J. E. McKirdy, advertising manager of the Pittsburg Railways company. The day proved a continuous round of pleasures.

The special car "Pittsburg" picked the Monongahela Valley writers up at the various towns along the valley and took them to the Washington branch, where the first stop was made at J. P. Murphy's model farm, at Meadowlands. The Washington newspapermen joined the party there. The Meadowlands stock farm, which is probably the most modern in the state of Pennsylvania, was gone over. The sanitary appliances of the stables and barns and other equipment brought forth much praise. Last, but not least of the hospitality shown the party by Mr. Murphy was a brimming glassful from his famous "egg nog" cow.

From Meadowlands the car was run to the Washington fair grounds at Arden. The grounds and stables, which have been greatly improved since last fall, were inspected and dinner was taken at the fair grounds hotel. Ham and eggs and corn—all

Congressman Temple Among Visitors and Speakers

TALKS ON THE TARIFF

Washington Countian Gives Views—Good Program is Rendered at Affair

Several hundred people attended the annual picnic of Fallowfield Grange, No. 108, in a grove near the Crow School House, Saturday. A picnic dinner was served after which addresses were made by Agriculturist J. M. McKee, Congressman H. W. Temple and Harry A. Jones Esq.

Mr. McKee talked chiefly on fruit growing. He told his hearers that in his judgment fruit would be an ideal side line in that region, but that he would advise that it should not be made the main crop. Along with trucking, he said, it would probably be found to be profitable. Mr. McKee outlined the manner of preparing ground for planting fruit trees and gave his experience and observation as to the best varieties of apples for this region. He gave it as his belief that the question of exposure was not of material importance. One thing Mr. McKee urged was the raising of more livestock in Washington county.

Congressman Temple talked on the making of a tariff bill and told how each step was taken toward the final passage of such a measure. At one point in his remarks the Congressman took occasion to say that he did not desire to be understood as charging that the Democrats are arbitrary in their methods or rulings in the current session in relation to the Un-

FULLICK MADE

DEFENDENT IN ANOTHER SUIT

Constable John J. Miller of Canonsburg, has through his counsel filed a suit in trespass for libel seeking to recover $10,000 from E. C. Fullick, of East Canonsburg, the deposed justice of the peace, who entered a plea of guilty this week to charges of extortion.

As stated previously in these columns, J. W. Crumm, also a constable of Canonsburg, Friday started a $10,000 libel damage suit against Mr. Fullick. No statements have been filed in either of these cases.

As in the Crumm action the one filed Saturday evidently is the outcome of the sworn statement furnished by Fullick to the press following his sentence on Wednesday last. In this statement he charges Crumm and Miller with participating in crimes of extortion.

The outcome of these actions of these two officials against Fullick will be awaited with interest. Fullick's statement was a most remarkable one and has caused considerable comment in the press and by citizens of Canonsburg.

COLD STORAGE LAW

"The benefits of cold storage in preventing waste of foodstuffs and regulating table supplies nobody doubts, says the Philadelphia Press." Under modern conditions cities could hardly exist without some such scheme. It has become almost as important to freeze surplus food as it is to cook the food for use. But it is evident that the surplus foodstuffs can be locked away to boost prices. It can also be stored up when for health's sake it had better be destroyed. The seizure of meats, poultry and eggs utterly unfit for human consumption, during the recent investigation of refrigerating plants in this city, amply justifies the vigilance of the authorities and the salutary if strict measures embodied in the new law.

"Storage houses must now be licensed under state authority. They must be clean and will be inspected, at given intervals by chemists acting for the state dairy and food commission. All food packages will have a time limit in storage. They must be tagged plainly as to the date when they are put in the refrigerating warehouse. Beef cannot be kept longer than four months, nor pork, mutton and lamb longer than six. Eggs may be stored for eight months, butter for nine, fish for the same period, veal for three months only, and fowl five or ten months, according to whether they are merely killed or 'dressed.' Such is the substance of the regulations just put into force by the new Pennsylvania law.

The statute will have a twofold effect of deep interest to every household. It will help to assure the buyers that the meats and other food, purchased are from sanitary storage and in quality sound and wholesome. It will prevent any undue "tie-up" of table commodities such as might create an artificial shortage and encourage graft. In the long run this hygienic measure should modify the high cost of living.

MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE

On the subject of "Marriage and Divorce," the New Castle News has the following to say:

"Representative Edward has introduced in congress a resolution proposing an amendment to the federal constitution to give the national lawmaking body the right to enact uniform divorce legislation. Similar efforts in the past have come to naught, despite the fact that the majority admit the need of such action.

"The resolution should also provide for uniform marriage laws. It is absurd that we have almost as many different marriage regulations as states. In this commonwealth persons desiring to wed must have the consent of parents or legal guardians, unless they have reached 21 years, Maryland, directly south, permits children of 16 to wed. Thus a girl of 'sweet sixteen'—or even less—provided she is willing to certify to an untruth—can be legally married in old Maryland. Much harm is thereby done, but the marriage license fees help slightly swell the compensation of officials who eagerly issue licenses to boost their receipts."

PICKED UP IN PASSING

The following decidedly interesting little poem has been handed in for the Picked up in Passing column:

The Tortoise and the Hare

You have read, of course, about the hare

And the tortoise—the tale is old—

How they ran a race—it counts not where—

And the tortoise won, we're told.

The hare was sure he had time to pause

And to browse about and play

So the tortoise won the race because

He just kept pegging away.

Ralph Waldo Trine, writing about "The Value of a College Education" in the September Woman's Home Companion, says in part:

"President Garfield's definition, or rather illustration, of an ideal university is perhaps now trite; but it is so homely and so truly illustrative that it still bears repetition: 'A log with Mark Hopkins on one end and a student on the other. There are such men scattered here and there in our colleges throughout the length and breadth of the land. Ask a hundred college graduates, especially after they have been out of college sufficiently long for right perspectives, what influence or what memory remains in its chief hold upon them, and perhaps close to seventy out of the hundred will reply. The memory of the friendship and the inspiration of good Professor—or good old Doctor——'"

She was a little Boston girl, about four or five years old, relates the Harrisburg Telegraph, who was enjoying a side on the sidewalk. Her heels flew up and she fell with great force on the stones. A woman picked her up and asked kindly: "You poor little mite, how did you fall?" The tiny child looked up into her kind friend's face and, with the tears streaming down her cheeks, sobbed, "Vertically, ma'am."

Attorney Harry Jones disclaimed all honor as a farmer, but said there was one thing in relation to the farmer of the section in which the picnic was held of which he had positive personal knowledge and that was the fact that the wives, daughters and sweethearts of Fallowfield grangers were cooks and bakers par excellence. After paying his tribute to the ladies Mr. Jones spoke on the enforcement of law. He congratulated the citizens of the county on the fact that no homicide case was to be heard at the term of court now under way, and said that every community is just what its residents make it. He urged every citizen to take an interest in the work of the constable in his district and to give commendation for every worthy act performed. Speaking of the influx of foreigners Mr. Jones pointed out that it was every citizen's duty to aid in leading them into ideal citizenship. He also urged the voters to take an interest in the primary elections so that they would have no complaint as to the character of the candidates put up. Not to do so, he said was to fail in their duties as citizens. Following was the program carried out under Grange Master R. E. Gregg, who acted as master of ceremonies:

COUNCILMEN OPPOSE LEAGUE; TELL WHY

sity of radical action to secure competent and honest officers for our town. Today we have a Democratic burgess and a Republican school board and council and I maintain that they are competent, efficient and honest. I feel that this wholesale implied defamation of character will tend only to keep honest and upright citizens from serving as borough officers."

The following was the resolution unanimously adopted, together with the signatures.

"Resolved that we earnestly endorse the statement made by our president W. R. Gaut in regard to the unjust reflections made against our borough officers by the 'Non-Partisan League of Charleroi, Pa.'"

Signed

W. H. Calvert,
D. R. Duvall,
J. K. Riecke,
Frank Riva,
Alden O. Davis,

The meeting of councilmen was not declared a meeting of council in any sense but a meeting in the interests of councilmen. President W. R. Gaut, of council, was by common consent the chairman of the meeting, and those present from council in addition to him were Dr. Alden O. Davis, J. K. Riecke, Frank Riva, W. H. Calvert, D. R. Duvall. Borough Clerk Ira L. Nickerson and a representative of the Mail were also present. The meeting was short and just the one thing was considered, with an unanimous request coming from the body to the Mail to print the statement in similar space to that which had been given the Non-Partisan league in recent issues.

Ambassador Lind seemed to be glad to become ambassador to Mexico. Personally, we would rather become chorister to a Free Methodist campmeeting.

D'j you ever see a man with his arms full of bundles trying to be polite when he meets a woman acquaintance on the street?

"Woman's death proved by coroner"—Headline. Gosh, has it come to the point where the coroner has to investigate before a person can legally be dead.

Roumania has joined the league and has not said much about the umpire.

Two Strenuous Lives.
Clovis Hughes, the French journalist, poet and duelist, filled his fifty-five years of life with sufficient excitement to make him worthy of special mention. One of his claims to distinction was that he had engaged in a French duel which resulted fatally—for the other man. He was a tempestuous, radical and was once suspended from the chamber of deputies for insulting remarks to the president, which did not at all curb him. He wrote a number of novels, poems and plays in which he sought to spread socialistic propaganda, and he wrote a pretentious five act drama in verse called "Le Sommeil de Danton" ("The Sleep of Danton"), which was produced at the Opera Comique. His wife contributed her share of excitement by killing a public official in the palace of justice because of an alleged insult. Before she was tried she wrote and acted "La Vengeance de Mme. Clovis Hughes." The play depicted her sensational act and represented her as triumphantly exonerated by the court. When her trial came the court did as predicted.

Gloves.

The origin of gloves is very ancient. Some authorities assert that they were known in Bible times, from references made to "shoes" which were thought to be identical with gloves. The first clear account of gloves comes, however, from Xenophon. This writer speaks of the Persians wearing gloves on their hands to protect them from the cold. Homer describes Laertes working in his garden with gloves upon his hands to protect them from the thorns, and Varro mentions this apparel as being worn by the Romans. Gloves have been tokens of solemn and important things from the ninth century. They were adopted as a rite of the church, and later the transferring of lands or titles was always attended with the presentation of gloves. In the eleventh century the method of challenging to single combat by throwing down a glove was instituted, and this custom still remains in some countries.

Pierpont Morgan's Fairy Palace.
Pierpont Morgan's wonderful house in Prince's Gate differed little on the outside from its neighbors, merely two houses rolled into one, but its interior suggested nothing so much as the fairy palace of Aladdin. In the hall a spring was pressed and part of one of the walls "fell away" in the approved style. You walked down into a basement, which at first sight resembled nothing so much as one of the lower decks on a large liner. Ranged along the walls were what appeared to be a number of safes, but they were really doors opening into small rooms, into each of which a particular portion of Mr. Morgan's collection had been brought. There were rooms for English silver, for porcelain and for half a dozen other objects d'art. No one who was ever fortunate enough to be shown round by Mr. Morgan himself can forget the experience.—London Bystander

Mercury Poisoning.

"I would suggest," says a doctor, "that, whenever persons are found to have swallowed bichloride of mercury, several eggs be forced down their throats. The albumen in the eggs will form a chemical compound with the mercury, which will be insoluble. Then the poison will pass out through the intestines or be vomited by the victim. It is always a good thing to pump out the stomach first or to induce vomiting. Many times it is necessary to act quickly if the life of the person is to be saved, and it takes time for a physician to arrive on the scene. Bichloride of mercury will not produce a painless death. It is a poison that paralyzes the liver. It eats through the walls of the stomach, and the victim generally dies in great agony."—Des Moines Register and Leader.

Witch Burning.

There are countries in which the execution of women as witches is only a thing of yesterday. The last instance of witch burning occurred as recently as 1888 in Peru, and in other parts of South America cases continued to occur until well into the second half of the nineteenth century. England's own last conviction for witchcraft took place at Hertford in 1712, and Scotland condemned a witch ten years later, while Spain and Germany retained a judicial belief in witches and the justice of killing them until 1782 and 1796.

Silence Preferred.

J. M. Barrie, the novelist, has said that one of the "most enjoyable social functions" he ever attended was a dinner at which he turned to his neighbor and asked, "Do you converse?" "No; I don't," replied his neighbor. "Nor do I," said Mr. Barrie, and they did not.—London Mail.

News to Him.

"Why is it that they never place the pictures of living men on banknotes?" asked the fellow who had become rich by writing the words of "popular" songs.

"Don't they?" the poet replied.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Taking No Chances.

"A man never loses anything by politeness," said the Old Fogey.

"I know a lot of men who never intend to," added the Grouch.—Cincinnati Inquirer.

Imitating the Ostrich

By ELLIOTT SMITH

One crisp October day a young man alighted from a train in a quiet vil-lage. During the summer he had met at a country resort a Miss Mathews, with whom he had dined about boating, fishing, swimming, dancing, in short, doing those things which, when done in company with a pretty girl, generate love almost as surely as a dynamo will generate electricity.

During the period that they were to-gether another young man named Dar-gan had come from the city, evidently for the purpose of being with the girl, for he immediately proceeded to mo-nopolize her. Since he showed plainly that he was a suitor the young man of the first part, Emery, who had no more idea of marrying a wife than he had of establishing a bank, dropped out in his favor, leaving the young lady free to accept his attentions. After several days passed in company with her Mr. Dargan left the resort, and Miss Mathews was again unabsorbed. Mr. Em-ery slowly drifted back to his former status.

There is no position more capable of exciting a man's self contempt than to occupy the time and attention of a young lady whom he has no thought of marrying. But let him once realize that he doesn't wish any one else to marry her and he cannot but consider himself a veritable dog in the manger. Such was the position occupied by Mr. Emery when he recommenced spend-ing his time in Miss Mathews' com-pany.

As he afterward said, he was like the ostrich that hides its head in the sand to avoid being observed. Yet he was observed not only by others, but by himself.

When Mr. Emery left the resort and Miss Mathews' society he had made a step in advance. He knew that he would rather be hanged for Mr. Dar-gan's murder than that the said Dar-gan should marry Miss Mathews. But why? Did he want her himself? Sure-ly he had not gone on his outing with the intention of becoming engaged? It was not feasible that he should become engaged. He had but $3,000 a year, and that was not sufficient to meet his own personal requirements. He did not know what Miss Mathews had and did not care. Matrimony was with him out of the question anyway.

Some five or six weeks after the part-ing he was weak enough to go to the place where Miss Mathews lived. He went there to see her, but why he did not know. He had no more intention of entering the lists with Dargan—or any one else, for that matter—than he had gone away in the summer to marry a wife. He had written her that he would be in the vicinity of her home and would make a stop for the purpose of "renewing an acquaintance so pleas-antly formed during the summer." He would call on a certain afternoon.

Why will persons say things they don't mean, knowing that those to whom they say them know they mean something else?

In what occurred during that visit I don't charge Miss Mathews with hav-ing purposely brought it about. Never-theless if she did she had a perfect right to do so. When Emery called on her that afternoon he was ushered by a maid into a cozy library, where stood a lady's writing desk on which Miss Mathews wrote her letters, and he had no sooner entered than he saw a letter ready for the post lying where it had been written. He could not well help seeing the superscription.

The epistle was addressed to Dargan. Was it one of a correspondence? Was it an acceptance? Was it a re-jection? That was for him to find out. When Miss Mathews came in in-stinctively arrayed, of course—she ex-pressed herself "much pleased to meet again a summer acquaintance."

A summer acquaintance—that was true, but it was galling. He had said that he was pleased "to renew an ac-quaintance," etc. That, he knew, was all folderol, but the same thing coming from Miss Mathews was very different. It was depressing, sadden-ing. Indeed, it was worse than a dozen funeral bells all tolling at once.

Miss Mathews' eyes fell on the letter on the desk. She started. Emery didn't start, but there was a sudden whirlwind of feeling within him which coagulated with a purpose. He plun-ged into the Rubicon.

Nevertheless he plunged so quietly that the net was not perceptible. He asked Miss Mathews whether she would go back to the same resort next year, and she said she didn't know; she hadn't thought much about it. Then he remarked that he thought he should spend his vacation next season in the autumn since he proposed to hunt. Both were talking about one thing and thinking about another—the letter on the desk. There was a pause in the conversation. Both looked up from the letter at the same moment, and their eyes met. Emery reached for it and tore it into little bits.

"You had no right to do that," said the girl.

"I'll write another." Taking up pen and paper, he wrote on it: "I have to announce to you my engagement to Mr. Emery, whom I met last summer in the country." Holding it up before her, he asked if she would put it in her own handwrit-ing and mail it.

"Yes," she said, and that is the end of the story, except that she after-ward told him she had refused Dargan before he left her at the summer re-sort.

It is one thing to make soda crackers that are occasion-ally good.

It is quite an-other thing to make them so that they are always better than all other soda crack-ers, always of unvarying goodness.

The name "Uneeda" stamped on ev-ery biscuit—means that if a million packages of Uneeda Bis-cuit were placed before you, you could choose any one of them, con-fident that every soda cracker in that package would be as good as the best Uneeda Biscuit ever baked. Five cents.

Great Eaters, Great Breakfasts. Looking over the aged pages of Mor-ris Berber's "Journey in America," which extended through Ohio, we found this account of a breakfast at Rushville June 16, 1817, in Fairland county:

"A gentleman, myself and three chil-dren sat down this morning to a re-past consisting of the following ar-ticles: Coffee, rolls, biscuit, dry toast, waffles in soft, hot cake of German ex-traction covered with butter, pickers, salted fish from Lake Huron, ven-er, cutlets, broiled ham, gooseberry pie, stewed currants, preserved cranberries butter and cheese. For all this for my self and three children and four gen-tlemen of outst and my for four horses we were charged 68. 1/2, or about $1.65."

There were great eaters in those days, and from this record they got plenty to eat. - Ohio State Journal.

First Chess Champion.

Authentic history locates chess in Persia in 700, and the word chess is known to be of Persian origin, coming from the word "shah," meaning "king," and chess has been considered a game for kings from time immemorial. The game found its first home in Spain re-ward the close of the fifteenth cen-tury, and in 1501 Ruy Lopez published his treatise, which is recognized as the foundation of all modern chess. His work was republished in Venice in 1534, and from that date the Italians became recognized for their chess dom-inance. The first chess champion seems to have been Paolo Boi, who de-feated every master of his time, in-cluding Ruy Lopez himself. Chess playing as an occupation is not a pro-fitable employment, although most of the chess masters devote their time exclusively to it and therefore earn a most precarious sort of a living.

The Horse For the Farmer.

Farmers need a balanced type of horse. No kind of work demands a greater number of qualifications. In hot weather and in cold, on good roads and in mud, with light machinery or an empty wagon and with the heavy gang plow or the big land of corn, the farm horse must cover a considerable distance each working day. Weight alone will not accomplish results any more than will speed alone. Farm horses to be efficient with modern heavy machinery and loads must be big, but the size must be combined with a balanced conformation. Seven-teen hands is a good height. We know that horses of this height and weighing around 1,600 to 1,800 pounds in moderate flesh can have active, grace-ful locomotion, and they easily cap-able to weigh a ton.—Breeder's Gazette.

Mailbag's Failure.

Mailbag was one of the most sensi-tive of authors, and M. Felix Duques-nel relates his reception of the news of one of his rare failures at the Odeon. He had taken refuge from his nervous-ness in the manager's office, and friends came to him from time to time to tell him how things were going. They could only tell him first that things were going badly and then that they were going worse. At the end of the fourth act they no longer thought it worth while to tell him any-thing at all. He in the meantime had collapsed. He had tumbled out of the armchair, fallen on the floor and rolled under the desk, and it was there that he was found, with his head buried in his hands, when an attendant at last entered to turn out the gas and lock the door.—Paris Temps.

Fearless With Wild Animals.

Karl Hagenbeck, the famous dealer in wild animals, became the real friend of the creatures from which the ordi-nary mortal turns with dread and fear. He lent the lions and tigers which at-tracted so much attention at the Phila-delphia exposition in 1876. On the opening day the man who had trained the animals and under whose direction they were to perform their wonderful tricks fell ill. Hagenbeck never hesi-tated one moment, but went into the cages, and the animals went through their performances for him and seemed to enjoy his presence. Years later he visited the New York zoo, and there one of the lions roared a welcome to him, evidently recognizing the kind master whom he had not seen in many years.—Exchange.

Fished For Silence.

Paley, the theologian, had an ingen-ious method of warring off the time waster. When thinking out a problem he betook himself to the river bank with a fishing rod. He never really fished, but he found that people who thought nothing of disturbing his thoughts would keep at a distance so as not to disturb the fish. To give col-or to the ruse he had his portrait painted with fishing rod in hand.

Cultivated.

The Old Man's Money.

"Did you hear 'bout the old man's experience in the bankin' business?" "No, What was it?" "Why, he put $50 in bank—first mon-ey he'd ever put there—an' the boys tol' him that he'd better keep a eye on the bank, as they failed mighty fre-quent an' he wuz liable to lose all."

"Well?"

"Well, he hung round that bank so constant that the bank people got sus-picious of him an' thought he wuz goin' to blow the bank up. Whenever he seen the cashier come out he fol-lered him round town, always keepin' him in sight. An' it wuz the same way with the bank president an' all the clerks. An' when he finally ap-plied for a job as janitor o' the in-stitution, so's he could be on the spot in case o' trouble, they had him arrest-ed, an' the judge decided that he wuz crazy, an' they wuz jest about to send him to a lunatic asylum when his friends explained things, an' the bank folks give him his money an' tol' him to git."—Exchange.

What First Aid Did For Him.

Over the telephone came a message that a man had been seriously hurt, and the specialist was urged to imme-diate attention. On entering the room where the patient lay the great doctor paused with a look of astonishment.

"My dear man," he exclaimed to the patient, "I didn't expect to find you in a condition like this! What have you been doing to yourself? Was it an automobile?"

"No, doctor," feebly replied the pa-tient. "I was walking along the street and slipped on a banana skin."

"Slipped on a banana skin!" cried the doctor, with greater amazement. "Do you mean to tell me that a banana skin did all this?"

"No, doctor," was the weak rejoinder of the patient. "When I fell I was carried into a store and treated by somebody who had studied first aid to the injured."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

The Clocks We Wear.

The three marks on the back of a glove and the clocks on a stocking are due practically to the same circum-stance. The glove marks correspond to the fourchette pieces between the fingers, and in other days these pieces were continued along the back of the hand, braid being used to conceal the seams.

A somewhat similar origin is assign-ed to the ornamental clock on the stocking. In the days when stockings were made of cloth the seams occurred where the clocks do now, the ornamen-tation then being used to conceal the seams.

The useless little bow in the leather band lining a man's hat is a survival of the time when a hat was made by taking a piece of leather, boring two holes through it and drawing it up with a piece of string.—Exchange

Two More to Feed.

Seasickness.

An Italian physician, who claims to know, says that "people who are sub-ject to seasickness should use atropine. The injection of one milligram of atro-pinum sulfuricum will keep seasick subjects well and free from the un-pleasant symptoms."

Choir Boys of Grace Church.

From 100 to 300 boys with voices are always waiting to be admitted to the choir of Grace church, New York. They are enrolled thirty or more at a time and come from all over the coun-try. Practically every one lives at the school for nine months of the year, says the Churchman. The boys' fam-ily find his books and clothing, Grace church does the rest—boards him, teaches him and employs him in its choir until he has outgrown the serv-ice. The choir boy is unpaid, and all money earned by him from musical en-gagements is kept by the choirmaster until he earns his honorable discharge. Parents must sign an agreement that their boys shall not be withdrawn from the school. The only musical re-quirements are a correct ear and the promise of a good and powerful voice.

Conflict of the Stars.

Every young star, such as our sun, attracts and gathers to itself quantities of impalpable cosmic dust which it en-counters on its journey through space. Therefore every youthful heavenly body is increasing in size. But on the other hand every old and wornout star reverses the process and instead of gathering in new supplies discharges its accumulations. In the end the old star is utterly disintegrated and dis-solved back into primordial dust which reassembles somewhere on the out-skirts of space where a new star is or-ganized. This process of tearing down old worlds and rebuilding new ones goes on perpetually. Some of the forces which nature employs for this work are light, electric currents and gravita-tion.—Kansas City Star.

His Master's Politics.

During a general election in England a canvasser called at the house of the late Professor Froude, the historian. Mr. Froude was out, so the canvasser had to content himself with interro-gating the butler as to how Mr. Froude would vote. The butler—an old serv-ant, who understood his master well—replied: "When the Liberals is in Mr. Froude is sometimes a Conservative. When the Conservatives is in, Mr. Froude is always a Liberal."

A Cynical Selection.

At a "book dinner," at which the guests were asked to wear clothes sug-gestive of the title of a popular book, a certain nobleman appeared carrying a petticoat over his arm. The title he was suggesting was "Life's Handi-cap!"—London Opinion.

INQUIRIES AS TO ENROLLMENT LAW

State officials who have been asked some of the numerous questions about the party enrollment law are advising people to enroll themselves by September 3. The assessors in the district outside of cities will sit on September 2 and 3 to enroll voters, and in the cities September 2 is the second registration day, the first being on August 28.

The point has been raised in some cities that there is no bar to enrollment on the third registration day, which falls on September 10, or three days before the primary, but the advice is to enroll by September 2 in cities, as the proximity of the third registration day to the primary day may cause delays in getting enrollment data to the election boards and result in confusion and even prevention of voting.

Men who do not enroll can vote only nonpartisan ballots, but no man who is not registered can vote at any primary.

COUPLE WEDDED AT HIGH NOON

At the First Christian church Sunday at noon the marriage of Miss Isabel Marie Wilson, of Charleroi, and Roland Graham Todd, of Steubenville, Ohio, occurred. The affair was marked with simplicity, and only the necessary witnesses were present, as Rev. H. C. Babbitt, former pastor of the church said the words uniting the couple.

In the afternoon the young couple left on a brief wedding journey after which they will go to Steubenville, where they will live. Miss Wilson was graduated in June from St. Xavier's Academy at Beatty, being one of the first honor students. Her husband is a Geneva College man.

Mr. Todd has been employed at the Phillips Sheet and Tin Plate mill at Steubenville as shipping clerk, holding a responsible position. He is well known in this vicinity, having visited here frequently. Miss Wilson is popular socially and is one of the local leaders in social affairs. She has been a member of the choir of the Calvary church, and has a beautiful and well cultivated voice. She has been paid marked compliments for her singing.

Miss Clara Pearson left Saturday for a visit with friends at Washington.

Martin was in the lead and in turning the corner at Guttery's store Martin's buggy upset and Mr. Martin and his sister were thrown out. The shafts of the buggy were torn loose but the horse was caught before making its getaway.

CHARLEROI WINS FROM BRUSHTON A. C. WITH EASE

With big Jake Smith in the box, Charleroi had a comparatively easy time winning their game from the Brushton A. C. Saturday afternoon on the local field by the score of 6 to 3. "Big Jake" allowed no tampering with his delivery, permitting the Brushtonites to brush out but five brushy hits. Meanwhile what the Independents of Charleroi did to two pitchers was awful. In all they hammered out 16 hits, some of them being lallapaloozers of the extreme type. In fact there was something of every variety from kiting, screaming three baggers, to piping, singles and sizzling home runs.

Charleroi scored two runs on three hits in the first. In the fourth two more players crossed the home pan on two hits, and in the seventh and eighth each, there was a run scored.

BARN BURNS TO GROUND

In a fire, supposedly of incendiary origin, the barn on the James Bristol farm about one and one-half miles from Harts Mills on the Amity road was totally destroyed between 1 and 2 o'clock Sunday morning. The barn was considered one of the best in the county and the loss on the building and contents is estimated at $5,000 with some little insurance.

Members of the Bristol household were awakened early by the reflection from the burning structure. They hastened out but the flames had made such progress that nothing could be done to save the building. The only thing rescued from the doomed structure was a set of work harness and this harness, cut into fragments, indicated the origin of the blaze.

The theory prevails that some vandal entered the barn and cut the work harness to pieces. While this engaged it is supposed the unknown dropped a lighted match thus setting fire to the barn.

The barn contained all this year's crops including oats and wheat in sheaf and hay, all of last year's wheat crop in the barns, much old oats, all the farming machinery including a new binder, two buggies and two clips of wool. All of this went up in smoke.

The building was 50x70 feet and was regarded as one of the best built and most conveniently arranged barns in the county.

Methodist Stamps.
Senator N's daughter, who is beautiful, religious and unsophisticated, went into a Washington drug store recently to purchase some stamps. "Ten cents' worth of stamps, please," she said timidly.
The drug clerk, who had an eye for feminine beauty, was struck with her appearance, so he gave her an engaging smile and urbanely asked: "What denomination?"
Disconcerted by his open admiration, she looked at him in astonishment, then, remembering the Scriptural injunction to be "prepared to give a reason for the faith that is within you," she replied, "Methodist." There was a moment's pause; then her face became suffused with angry blushes, and she continued, "But I do not see what that has to do with my stamps."

Story of the Vote in Fiji.
The Indian merchants in Fiji in municipal elections vote solid for the wealthy storekeeper and landowner, who, says Rait Stock in "Confessions of a Tenderfoot," represent vested interests and owe them money.
On one occasion that is fresh in the mind of every one in Suva, these Indian merchants were rounded up and driven to the polls like sheep, well primed beforehand to vote for—we shall say Johnson and Jacobson. These instructions had been so impressed upon them that their vocabulary for days consisted of nothing but "Johnson and Jacobson." "Move up there," said the clerk of a polling booth on the great day, to a line of apprehensive Indians. "D'you hear? Move up!" "Johnson and Jacobson," answered the latter as one man.

Curious English Dialects.
Our English dialects are probably as diverse as any. Put a Scottish miner and a Northumberland miner together for the first time and each would only have a faint glimmering of the meaning of the other's speech. What would the Cornishman think of "What mak' o' yan is sha?" He would express the same meaning in "What be her like, then?" The ordinary English, of course, is, "What's she like?" I have known a Londoner, fresh to the fine Dorset dialect, completely bewildered by a farm laborer's talk. He could only get a glintz of meaning here and there.—London Chronicle.

COUNCILMEN OPPOSE LEAGUE AND TELL WHY

Non-Partisan Organization of Charleroi is Handed Body Blow

STATEMENT PREPARED

Short Meeting This Morning Terminates in Declaration Being Made

Deeming that the recently formed Non-Partisan league of Charleroi has in a way cast reflection upon their actions and faithfulness as borough councilmen, and considering that in the same way the services of borough officials have been depreciated, councilmen this morning at a meeting of councilmen adopted a resolution endorsing a statement prepared in their own defense at their suggestion by President W. R. Gaut. The statement read to the body by Mr. Gaut showed wherein opposition lies to the Non-Partisan league. The statement as read follows:

"Gentlemen:— I take the present opportunity to express my disapproval and resentment of the unjust rejection made within the past week upon the competency and honesty of all our borough officials. This rejection was made by the 'Non-Partisan League of Charleroi, Pa.' an organization formed recently for the purpose—as it is alleged—of electing honest and competent borough officers. This allegation implies strongly that all the present borough officials are dishonest and incompetent. This serious reflection on the character of each and every officer of this borough was given to the press and through it was sent broadcast throughout the country.

"I as a citizen of Charleroi resent this unjust and unrighteous reflection upon our splendid upright and efficient burgess, who for the past four years has served this borough so efficiently and honestly that instead of seeking to place a blot on his character our citizens should be a unit in proclaiming their pride in his excellent upright and businesslike administration. Our schools are the equal of any others within our state and Pennsylvania prides herself on her good schools. That we have such splendid schools is due to the board, careful and honest work of our school directors and I protest against the implication of inefficiency and dishonesty made against these good, moral, efficient and upright citizens.

"I am now serving my fourth year in council and I emphatically resent the reflection on my competency and honesty. I have always advocated improvement consistent with our resources. I have at all times advocated good order and the strict enforcement of all our laws and ordinances governing morality and right living. I resent this ruthless implied defamation of the character of my fellow councilmen. They are men of good character honesty and ability and in no way are they deserving of this unjust implied censure.

"Charleroi since its inception has been remarkably free from graft and dishonesty in its officials and I see no need of a non-partisan movement that heralds throughout the land the neces-

Many Attend Campmeeting

Hundreds Go From Charleroi Vicinity for Bentleyville Gathering

Hundreds from Charleroi and vicinity attended campmeeting at Bentleyville Sunday morning. They went out by train, automobile buggy and hack. The crowds that visited Bentleyville in the morning were slim but in the afternoon when the sun began to set its heat, the people began to swarm in, so that by the latter part of the afternoon the campmeeting grounds were alive with people. Special accommodations are being provided for visitors from along the Monongahela valley by the railroad and by automobilists.

PROHIBS WANT ON BALLOT

State Chairman Says They are Going to Ask for Rights

SEEK PRIMARY VOTE

Chairman Burton L. Rockwood of the Prohibition State committee, declared at Harrisburg Saturday that the Prohibition party would name its own county tickets in every county of the state and would paddle its own canoe in the campaign. The chairman left for northeastern counties, where he will meet local leaders and arrange the details of filing papers.

Mr. Rockwood said that the Prohibition party was entitled to have ballots printed and that it would insist upon its rights from county commissioners. "There is no doubt about our right to the use of ballots and I have instructed our people in several counties where the question has been raised to take the matter before the courts if necessary," said he. It is understood that in Lackawanna county the right to ballots was questioned and the chairman of the county committee will fight the commissioners if they refuse to print.

The state chairman said that the party would have its candidates for state committee and other offices to be filled this fall and was preparing to figure actively in the gubernatorial campaign next year.

IS CANDIDATE FOR RE-ELECTION

J. W. Mathias Presents His Name as Candidate for Tax Collector

J. W. Mathias the present tax collector for the borough of Charleroi, today is making his announcement as a candidate, for re-election to office, subject to Republican rules. Mr. Mathias is a man who has been a citizen of Charleroi for 19 years, coming here when the Macbeth-Evans plant was first started. He has been during much of his residence here a heavy taxpayer, and has always been a man much interested in the welfare of the town. As tax collector Mr. Mathias has made a painstaking official, which his friends argue is reason for his continuance in office. He is a substantial citizen and one who knows his business in the office of tax collector, besides having the value of a one-term experience in the office.

Pittsburg Railways Company Host to Newspaper Men

TOUR TWO BRANCHES

Members of the Monongahela Valley Press association, and newspaper men from inter-county points had their annual outing Saturday as guests of J. E. McKirdy, advertising manager of the Pittsburg Railways company. The day proved a continuous round of pleasures.

The special car "Pittsburg" picked the Monongahela Valley writers up at the various towns along the valley and took them to the Washington branch, where the first stop was made at J. P. Murphy's model farm at Meadowlands. The Washington newspapermen joined the party at the Meadowlands stock farm, which is probably the most modern in the state of Pennsylvania, was gone over. The sanitary appliances of the stables and barns and other equipment brought forth much praise. Last but not least of the hospitality shown the party by Mr. Murphy was a brimming glassful from his famous "egg nog" cow.

From Meadowlands the car was run to the Washington fair grounds at Arden. The grounds and stables, which have been greatly improved since last fall, were inspected and dinner was taken at the fair grounds hotel. Ham and eggs and corn—all

TALKS ON THE TARIFF

Washington Countian Gives Views—Good Program is Rendered at Affair

Several hundred people attended the annual picnic of Fallowfield Grange, No. 108, in a grove near the Crow School House, Saturday. A picnic dinner was served after which addresses were made by Agriculturist J. M. McKee, Congressman H. W. Temple and Harry A. Jones Esq.

Mr. McKee talked chiefly on fruit growing. He told his hearers that in his judgment fruit would be an ideal side line in that region, but that he would advise that it should not be made the main crop. Along with trucking, he said, it would probably be found to be profitable. Mr. McKee outlined the manner of preparing ground for planting fruit trees and gave his experience and observation as to the best varieties of apples for this region. He gave it as his belief that the question of exposure was not of material importance. One thing Mr. McKee urged was the raising of more livestock in Washington county.

Congressman Temple talked on the making of a tariff bill and told how each step was taken toward the final passage of such a measure. At one point in his remarks the Congressman took occasion to say that he did not desire to be understood as charging that the Democrats are arbitrary in their methods or rulings in the current session in relation to the Un-

FULLICK MADE DEFENDENT IN ANOTHER SUIT

Constable John J. Miller of Canonsburg, has through his counsel filed a suit in trespass for libel seeking to recover $10,000 from E. C. Fullick of East Canonsburg, the deposed justice of the peace, who entered a plea of guilty this week to charges of extortion.

As stated previously in these columns, J. W. Crumm, also a constable of Canonsburg, Friday started a $10,000 libel damage suit against Mr. Fullick. No statements have been filed in either of these cases.

As in the Crumm action the one filed Saturday evidently is the outcome of the sworn statement furnished by Fullick to the press following his sentence on Wednesday last. In this statement he charges Crumm and Miller with participating in crimes of extortion.

The outcome of these actions of these two officials against Fullick will be awaited with interest. Fullick's statement was a most remarkable one and has caused considerable comment in the press and by citizens of Canonsburg.

COLD STORAGE LAW

"The benefits of cold storage in preventing waste of foodstuffs and regulating table supplies nobody doubts, says the Philadelphia Press." Under modern conditions cities could hardly exist without some such scheme. It has become almost as important to freeze surplus food as it is to cook the food for use. But it is evident that the surplus foodstuffs can be locked away to boost prices. It can also be stored up when for health's sake it had better be destroyed. The seizure of meats, poultry and eggs utterly unfit for human consumption, during the recent investigation of refrigerating plants in this city, amply justifies the vigilance of the authorities and the salutary if strict measures embodied in the new law.

"Storage houses must now be licensed under state authority. They must be clean and will be inspected at given intervals by chemists acting for the state dairy and food commission. All food packages will have a time limit in storage. They must be tagged plainly as to the date when they are put in the refrigerating warehouse. Beef cannot be kept longer than four months, nor pork, mutton and lamb longer than six. Eggs may be stored for eight months, butter for nine, fish for the same period, veal for three months only, and fowl five or ten months, according to whether they are merely killed or 'dressed.' Such is the substance of the regulations just put into force by the new Pennsylvania law.

The statute will have a twofold effect of deep interest to every householder. It will help to assure the buyers that the meats and other foods purchased are from sanitary storage and to deter the unscrupulous dealer from adulterating his wares. It will prevent any undue 'tie-up' of staple commodities such as might create an artificial shortage and encourage graft. In the long run this hygienic measure should modify the high cost of living.

MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE

On the subject of "Marriage and Divorce," the New Castle News has

"Representative Edmond has introduced in congress a resolution proposing an amendment to the federal constitution to give the national law-making body the right to enact uniform divorce legislation. Similar efforts in the past have come to naught, despite the fact that the majority admit the need of such action.

"The resolution should also provide for uniform marriage laws. It is absurd that we have almost as many different marriage regulations as states. In this commonwealth persons desiring to wed must have the consent of parents or legal guardians, unless they have reached 21 years, Maryland, directly south, permits children of 16 to wed. Thus a girl of 'sweet sixteen'—or even less, provided she is willing to certify to an untruth—can be legally married in old Maryland. Much harm is done by the present patchwork of license fees help slightly swell the compensation of officials who eagerly issue licenses to boost their receipts."

PICKED UP IN PASSING

The following decidedly interesting little poem has been handed in for the Picked up in Passing column:

The Tortoise and the Hare
You have read, of course, about the hare

And the tortoise—the tale is old—
How they ran a race—it counts not where—

And the tortoise won, we're told.
The hare was sure he had time to pause

And to browse about and play
So the tortoise won the race because
He just kept pegging away.

Ralph Waldo Trine, writing about "The Value of a College Education" in the September Women's Home Companion, says in part:

"President Garfield's definition, or rather illustration, of an ideal university is perhaps now trite, but it is so homely and so truly illustrative that it still bears repetition: 'A log with Mark Hopkins on one end and a student on the other. There are such men scattered here and there in our colleges throughout the length and breadth of the land. Ask a hundred college graduates, especially after they have been out of college sufficiently long for right perspectives, what influence or what memory remains in its chief hold upon them, and perhaps close to seventy out of the hundred will reply: The memory of the friendship and the inspiration of good Professor—or good old Doctor——'"

She was a little Boston girl, about four or five years old, relates the Harrisburg Telegraph, who was enjoying a ride on the sidewalk. Her heels flew up and she fell with great force on the stones. A woman picked her up and asked kindly: "You poor little mite, how did you fall?" The tiny child looked up into her kind friend's face and, with the tears streaming down her cheeks, sobbed, "Vertically, ma'am."

Attorney Harry Jones disclaimed all honor as a farmer, but said there was one thing in relation to the farmer of the section in which the picnic was held of which he had positive personal knowledge and that was the fact that the wives, daughters and sweethearts of Fallowfield grangers were cooks and bakers par excellence. After paying his tribute to the ladies Mr Jones spoke on the enforcement of law. He congratulated the citizens of the county on the fact that no term of court now under way, and said that every community is just what its residents make it. He urged every citizen to take an interest in the work of the constable in his district and to give commendation for every worthy act performed. Speaking of the influx of foreigners Mr Jones pointed out that it was every citizen's duty to aid in leading them into ideal citizenship. He also urged the voters to take an interest in the primary elections so that they would have no complaint as to the character of the candidates put up. Not to do so, he said was to fail in their duties as citizens. Following was the program carried out under Grange Master R. E. Greag, who acted as master of ceremonies:

COUNCILMEN OPPOSE LEAGUE; TELL WHY

city of radical action to secure competent and honest officers for our town. Today we have a Democratic burgess and a Republican school board and council and I maintain that they are competent, efficient and honest. I feel that this wholesale implied defamation of character will tend only to keep honest and upright citizens from serving as borough officers."

The following was the resolution unanimously adopted, together with the signatures.

"Resolved that we earnestly endorse the statement made by our president W. R. Gaut in regard to the unjust reflections made against our borough officers by the 'Non-Partisan League of Charleroi, Pa.'"

Signed
W. R. Gaut,
W. H. Calvert,
D. R. Duvall,
J. K. Rickey,
Frank Riva,
Alden O. Davis.

The meeting of councilmen was not declared a meeting of council in any sense but a meeting in the interests of councilmen. President W. R. Gaut, of council, was by common consent the chairman of the meeting, and those present from council in addition to him were Dr. Alden O. Davis, J. K. Rickey, Frank Riva, W. H. Calvert, D. R. Duvall. Borough Clerk Ira L. Nickerson and a representative of the Mail were also present. The meeting was short and just the one thing was considered, with an unanimous request coming from the body to the Mail to print the statement in similar space to that which had been given the Non-Partisan league in recent issues.

Ambassador Lind seemed to be glad to become ambassador to Mexico. Personally, we would rather become chorister to a Free Methodist campmeeting.

"Woman's death proved by coroner"—Headline. Gosh, has it come to the point where the coroner has to investigate before a person can legally be dead.

Boymania has joined the league and has not said much about the umpire.

Two Strenuous Lives.

Clovis Hughes, the French journalist, poet and duelist, filled his fifty-five years of life with sufficient excitement to make him worthy of special mention. One of his claims to distinction was that he had engaged in a French duel which resulted fatally—for the other man. He was a tempestuous radical and was once suspended from the chamber of deputies for insulting remarks to the president, which did not at all curb him. He wrote a number of novels, poems and plays in which he sought to spread socialistic propaganda, and he wrote a pretentious five act drama in verse called "Le Sommeil de Danton" ("The Sleep of Danton"), which was produced at the Opera Comique. His wife contributed her share of excitement by killing a public official in the palace of justice because of an alleged insult. Before she was tried she wrote and acted "La Vegeance de Marie. Clovis Hughes." The play depicted her sensational act and represented her as triumphantly exonerated by the court. When her trial came the court did as predicted.

Gloves.

Some authorities assert that they were known in Bible times, from references made to "shoes" which were thought to be identical with gloves. The first clear account of gloves comes, however, from Xenophon. This writer speaks of the Persians wearing gloves on their hands to protect them from the cold. Homer describes Laertes working in his garden with gloves upon his hands to protect them from the thorns, and Varro mentions this apparel as being worn by the Romans. Gloves have been tokens of solemn and important things from the ninth century. They were adopted as a rite of the church, and later the transferring of lands or titles was always attended with the presentation of gloves. In the eleventh century the method of challenging to single combat by throwing down a glove was instituted, and this custom still remains in some countries.

Pierpont Morgan's Fairy Palace.
Pierpont Morgan's wonderful house in Prince's Gate differed little on the outside from its neighbors, merely two houses rolled into one, but its interior suggested nothing so much as the fairy palace of Aladdin. In the hall a spring was pressed and part of one of the walls "fell away" in the approved style. You walked down into a basement, which at first sight resembled nothing so much as one of the lower decks on a large liner. Ranged along the walls were what appeared to be a number of safes, but they were really doors opening into small rooms, into each of which a particular portion of Mr. Morgan's collection had been brought. There were rooms for English silver, for porcelain and for half a dozen other objects d'art. No one who was ever fortunate enough to be shown round by Mr. Morgan himself can forget the experience.—London Bystander

Mercury Poisoning.
"I would suggest," says a doctor, "that, whenever persons are found to have swallowed bichloride of mercury, several eggs be forced down their throats. The albumen in the eggs will form a chemical compound with the mercury, which will be insoluble. Then the poison will pass out through the intestines or be vomited by the victim. It is always a good thing to pump out the stomach first or to induce vomiting. Many times it is necessary to act quickly if the life of the person is to be saved, and it takes time for a physician to arrive on the scene. Bichloride of mercury will not produce a painless death. It is a poison that paralyzes the liver. It enters through the walls of the stomach, and the victim generally dies in great agony."—Des Moines Register and Leader.

Witch Burning.
There are countries in which the execution of women as witches is only a thing of yesterday. The last instance of witch burning occurred as recently as 1888 in Peru, and in other parts of South America cases continued to occur until well into the second half of the nineteenth century. England's own last conviction for witchcraft took place at Hertford in 1712, and Scotland condemned a witch ten years later, while Spain and Germany retained a judicial belief in witches and the justice of killing them until 1722 and 1796.

Silence Preferred.
J. M. Barrie, the novelist, has said that one of the "most enjoyable social functions" he ever attended was a dinner at which he turned to his neighbor and asked, "Do you converse?" "No; I don't," replied his neighbor. "Not do I," said Mr. Barrie, and they did not.—London Mail.

News to Him.

"I know a lot of men who never found to," added the Grouch.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Imitating the Ostrich

By ELLIOTT SMITH

One crisp October day a young man alighted from a train in a quiet village. During the summer he had met at a country resort a Miss Mathews, with whom he had dined about, boating, fishing, swimming, dancing, in short, doing those things which, when done in company with a pretty girl, generate love almost as surely as a dynamo will generate electricity.

During the period that they were together another young man named Dargan had come from the city, evidently for the purpose of being with the girl, for he immediately proceeded to monopolize her. Since he showed plainly that he was a snorer the young man of the first part, Emery, who had no more idea of marrying a wife than he had of establishing a bank, dropped out in his favor, leaving the young lady free to accept his attentions. After several days passed in company with her Mr. Dargan left the resort, and Miss Mathews was again unabsorbed. Mr. Emery slowly drifted back to his former status.

There is no position more capable of exciting a man's self contempt than to occupy the time and attention of a young lady whom he has no thought of marrying. But let him once realize that he doesn't wish any one else to marry her and he cannot but consider himself a veritable dog in the manger. Such was the position occupied by Mr. Emery when he recommenced spending his time in Miss Mathews' company.

As he afterward said, he was like the ostrich that hides its head in the sand to avoid being observed. Yet he was observed not only by others, but by himself.

When Mr. Emery left the resort and Miss Mathews' society he had made a step in advance. He knew that he would rather be hanged for Mr. Dargan's murder than that the said Dargan should marry Miss Mathews. But why? Did he want her himself? Surely he had not gone on his outing with the intention of becoming engaged? It was not feasible that he should become engaged. He had but $3,000 a year, and that was not sufficient to meet his own personal requirements. He did not know what Miss Mathews had and did not care. Matrimony was with him out of the question anyway.

Some five or six weeks after the parting he was weak enough to go to the place where Miss Mathews lived. He went there to see her, but why he did not know. He had no more intention of entering the lists with Dargan—or any one else, for that matter—than he had gone away in the summer to marry a wife. He had written her that he would be in the vicinity of her home and would make a stop for the purpose of "renewing an acquaintance so pleasantly formed during the summer." He would call on a certain afternoon.

Why will persons say things they don't mean, knowing that those to whom they say them know they mean something else?

In what occurred during that visit I don't charge Miss Mathews with having purposely brought it about. Nevertheless if she did she had a perfect right to do so. When Emery called on her that afternoon he was ushered by a maid into a cozy library, where stood a lady's writing desk, on which Miss Mathews wrote her letters, and he had no sooner entered than he saw a letter ready for the post lying where it had been written. He could not well help seeing the superscription.

The epistle was addressed to Dargan. Was it one of a correspondence? Was it an acceptance? Was it a rejection? That was for him to find out.

When Miss Mathews came in—tastefully arrayed, of course—she expressed herself "much pleased to meet him on a summer acquaintance."

A summer acquaintance—that was true, but it was galling. He had said that he was pleased "to renew an acquaintance," etc. That, he knew, was all falderol, but the same thing coming from Miss Mathews was very different. It was depressing, saddening. Indeed, it was worse than a dozen funeral bells all tolling at once.

Miss Mathews' eyes fell on the letter on the desk. She started. Emery didn't start, but there was a sudden whirlwind of feeling within him which coagulated with a purpose. He plunged into the Rubicon.

Nevertheless he plunged so quietly that the net was not perceptible. He asked Miss Mathews whether she would go back to the same resort next year, and she said she didn't know; she hadn't thought much about it. Then he remarked that he thought he should spend his vacation next season in the autumn since he proposed to hunt. Both were talking about one thing and thinking about another—the letter on the desk. There was a pause in the conversation. Both looked up from the letter at the same moment, and their eyes met. Emery reached for it and tore it into little bits.

"You had no right to do that," said the girl.

"I'll write another," he wrote on it: "I have to announce to you my engagement to Mr. Emery, whom I met last summer in the country." Holding it up before her, he asked if she would put it in her own handwriting and mail it.

"Yes," she said, and that in the end of the story, except that she afterward told him she had refused Dargan before he left her at the summer resort.

It is one thing to make soda crackers that are occasionally good.

It is quite another thing to make them so that they are always better than all other soda crackers, always of unvarying goodness.

The name "Uneeda"—stamped on every biscuit—means that if a million packages of Uneeda Biscuit were placed before you, you could choose any one of them, confident that every soda cracker in that package would be as good as the best Uneeda Biscuit ever baked. Five cents.

Great Eaters. Great Breakfasts. Looking over the record books of Morris Herbert's "Journey in America," which extended through Ohio, we found this account of a breakfast at Rushville June 18, 1871, in Fairfield county:

"A gentleman, myself and three children sat down this morning to a repast consisting of the following articles: Coffee, rolls, biscuit, dry toast, waffles (a soft, hot cake of German extraction covered with butter, pickles, salted fish from Lake Huron, vegetables, broiled ham, gooseberry pie, stewed currants, preserved cranberries, butter and cheese. For all this for myself and three children and four children of ours and hay for four horses we were charged $6.90, or about $1.65."

There were great eaters in those days, and from this record they got plenty to eat. - Ohio State Journal.

First Chess Champion.

Authentic history locates chess in Persia in 500, and the word chess is known to be of Persian origin, coming from the word "shah," meaning "king," and chess has been considered a game for kings from time immemorial. The game found its first home in Spain toward the close of the fifteenth century, and in 1561 Ray Lopez published his treatise, which is recognized as the foundation of all modern chess. His work was republished in Venice in 1534, and from that date the Italians became recognized for their chess dominance. The first chess champion seems to have been Paolo Bot, who defeated every master of his time, including Ray Lopez himself. Chess playing as an occupation is not a profitable employment, although most of the chess masters devote their time exclusively to it and therefore earn a most precarious sort of a living.

CHICHESTER'S PILLS

The Horse For the Farmer.
Farmers need a balanced type of horse. No kind of work demands a greater number of qualifications. In hot weather and in cold, on good roads and in mud, with light machinery or an empty wagon and with the heavy gang plow or the big load of corn, the farm horse must cover a considerable distance each working day. Weight alone will not accomplish results any more than will speed alone. Farm horses to be efficient with modern heavy machinery and loads must be big, but the size must be combined with a balanced conformation. Seventeen hands is a good height. We know that horses of this height and weighing around 1,600 to 1,800 pounds in moderate flesh can have active, graceful locomotion, and they easily fatten to weigh a ton. - Breeders' Gazette.

Mailbag's Failure.

Mellac was one of the most sensitive of authors, and M. Felix Duguesne relates his reception of the news of one of his rare failures at the Odéon. He had taken refuge from his nervousness in the manager's office, and friends came to him from time to time.

They could only tell him first that things were going badly and then that they were going worse. At the end of the fourth act they no longer thought it worth while to tell him anything at all. He in the meantime had collapsed. He had tumbled out of the armchair, fallen on the floor and rolled under the desk, and it was there that he was found, with his head buried in his hands, when an attendant at last entered to turn out the gas and lock the door. - Paris Temps.

Fearless With Wild Animals.

Karl Hagenbeck, the famous dealer in wild animals, became the real friend of the creatures from which the ordinary mortal turns with dread and fear. He leut the lions and tigers which attracted so much attention at the Philadelphia exposition in 1876. On the opening day the man who had trained the animals and under whose direction they were to perform their wonderful tricks fell ill. Hagenbeck never hesitated one moment, but went into the cages, and the animals went through their performances for him and seemed to enjoy his presence. Years later he visited the New York zoo, and there one of the lions roared a welcome to him, evidently recognizing the kind master whom he had not seen in many years. - Exchange.

Fished For Silence.

Paley, the theologian, had an ingenious method of warding off the time waster. When thinking on a problem he betook himself to the river bank with a fishing rod. He never really fished, but he found that people who thought nothing of disturbing his thoughts would keep at a distance so as not to disturb the fish. To give color to the ruse he had his portrait painted with fishing rod in hand.

Cultivated.

Mrs. Hart—Oh, I have the grandest husband. Mrs. Telme—is he? Mrs. Hart—is he? Why, when I tell him my dress is going to be peau de sole cretonne trimmed in ecru, with voile and cluny insertion, he knows just what I mean. - Kansas City Star.

The Old Man's Money.
"Did you hear 'bout the old man's experience in the bankin' business?"
"No, what was it?"
"Why, he put $60 in bank—first money he'd ever put there—an' the boys tol' him that he'd better keep a eye on the bank, as they failed mighty frequent an' he wuz liable to lose all."

"Well, he bung round that bank so constant that the bank people got suspicious of him an' thought he wuz goin' to blow the bank up. Whenever he seen the cashier come out he folloed him round town, always keepin' him in sight. An' it wuz the same way with the bank president an' all the clerks. An' when he finally applied for a job as janitor o' the institution, so's he could be on the spot in case o' trouble, they had him arrested, an' the judge decided that he wuz crazy, an' they wuz jest about to send him to a lunatic asylum when his friends explained things, an' the bank folks give him his money an' tol' him to git." - Exchange.

What First Aid Did For Him.

One day a man had been seriously hurt, and the specialist was urged to immediate attention. On entering the room where the patient lay the great doctor paused with a look of astonishment.

"My dear man," he exclaimed to the patient, "I didn't expect to find you in a condition like this! What have you been doing to yourself? Was it an automobile?"

"No, doctor," feebly replied the patient. "I was walking along the street and slipped on a banana skin."

"Slipped on a banana skin?" cried the doctor, with greater amazement. "Do you mean to tell me that a banana skin did all this?"

"No, doctor," was the weak rejoinder of the patient. "When I fell I was carried into a store and treated by somebody who had studied first aid to the injured." - Philadelphia Telegraph.

The Clocks We Wear.

The three marks on the back of a glove and the clocks on a stocking are due practically to the same circumstance. The glove marks correspond to the fourchette pieces between the fingers, and in other days these pieces were continued along the back of the hand, braid being used to conceal the seams.

A somewhat similar origin is assigned to the ornamental clock on the stocking. In the days when stockings were made of cloth the seams occurred where the clocks do now, the ornamentation then being used to conceal the seams.

The useless little bow in the leather band lining a man's hat is a survival of the time when a hat was made by taking a piece of leather, boring two holes through it and drawing it up with a piece of string. - Exchange.

Two More to Feed.

"You are a fraud! You said yesterday that you had seven starving children, and today you say you have nine."

"How do you make that out?"

Seasickness.
An Italian physician, who claims to know, says that "people who are subject to seasickness should use atropine. The injection of one milligram of atropine sulphuricum will keep seasickness subjects well and free from the unpleasant symptoms."

Choir Boys of Grace Church.

From 100 to 300 boys with voices are always waiting to be admitted to the choir of Grace church, New York. They are enrolled thirty or more at a time and come from all over the country. Practically every one lives at the school for nine months of the year, says the Churchman. The boy's family find his books and clothing. Grace church does the rest—boards him, teaches him and employs him in its choir until he has outgrown the service. The choir boy is unpaid, and all money earned by him from musical engagements is kept by the choirmaster until he earns his honorable discharge. Parents must sign an agreement that their boys shall not be withdrawn from the school. The only requirements are a correct ear and the promise of a good and powerful voice.

Conflict of the Stars.

Every young star, such as our sun, attracts and gathers to itself quantities of impalpable cosmic dust which it encounters on its journey through space. Therefore every youthful heavenly body is increasing in size. But on the other hand every old and worn-out star reverses the process and instead of gathering in new supplies discharges its accumulations. In the end the old star is utterly disintegrated and dissolved back into primordial dust which reassembles somewhere on the outskirts of space where a new star is organized. This process of tearing down old worlds and rebuilding new ones goes on perpetually. Some of the forces which nature employs for this work are light, electric currents and gravitation. - Kansas City Star.

His Master's Politics.

During a general election in England a canvasser called at the house of the late Professor Froude, the historian. Mr. Froude was out, so the canvasser had to content himself with interrogating the butler as to how Mr. Froude would vote. The butler—an old servant, who understood his master well—replied: "When the Liberals is in, Mr. Froude is sometimes a Conservative. When the Conservatives is in, Mr. Froude is always a Liberal."

A Cynical Selection.

At a "book dinner," at which the guests were asked to wear clothes suggestive of the title of a popular book, a certain nobleman appeared carrying a petticoat over his arm. The title he was suggesting was "Life's Handicap!" - London Opinion.

Generous.

Father (visiting at college)—My son, these are better cigars than I can afford. Son—That's all right, father. Take all you want. This is on me. - Exchange.

We learn wisdom from failure more than from success. We often discover what will do by finding out what will not do. - Samuel Smiles.

Made Two Faces With One Sketch.

Sentari in Atlanta is needlessly confused with its namesake on the Bosporus in Asia Minor because one place is always spelled and pronounced Skodas except in western Europe. Edward Lear, the painter who invented "Lilliputians," had a quaint adventure here. He made a drawing of his host in Skodas costume when a younger brother of the model came in and wanted to be sketched. Lear for lack of paper was obliged to make a smaller portrait of him on the same page. Thereupon the younger exclaimed in a fury of indignation: "It is true I am younger, but I am not smaller than my brother. Why do you not so insultingly?" Before the amazed artist could apologize the older brother added: "If you think to win my society by a complimentary paid me at the expense of my brother you are greatly mistaken." Lear adds: "I had made two enemies by one sketch, the injured brothers bowing me out with looks of thunder."—London Standard.

How to Get Rugs Cleaned.

She told the agent for the vacuum cleaner that she really did intend to buy one, but could not decide which to choose. It was at this time that another agent, for another vacuum cleaner, came around the corner of the north side home. An argument ensued. "This cleaner is nickel plated; it is light and compact, the rubber is the best vulcanized."

"My machine, lady," interrupted the second agent, "is the lightest and most durable machine on the market. It is—"

"Excuse me," said the woman of the house. She was absent a moment, then reappeared with a rug.

"We shall see now which is the better," she said.

Ten minutes later she excused herself again and entered the house with a spotless rug. Two agents shook hands and swore they would "never tell."—Indianapolis News.

Hair High in the Air.

Women's hair used to be dressed to an amazing height in days of old. Formerly doorways had to be heightened to accommodate the eighteenth century woman of fashion. Marie Antoinette's hairdresser had to mount a stool in order to get above his work. Women of that time and to kneel in their coaches to get their head covering inside or drive with their heads out of window. Mme. de Genlis was caught by her hair while hastening to greet Voltaire at Ferney, but escaped Absalom's fate, her hair remaining on the bough. And the Duchesse de Chartres had room on her hair one evening for a miniature man-of-war in full sail, on another for a representation of her little son, Louis Philippe, sleeping in the lap of his nurse.

INQUIRIES AS TO ENROLLMENT LAW

State officials who have been asked some of the numerous questions about the party enrollment law are advising people to enroll themselves by September 3. The assessors in the district outside of cities will sit on September 2 and 3 to enroll voters, and in the cities September 2 is the second registration day, the first being on August 28.

The point has been raised in some cities that there is no bar to enrollment on the third registration day, which falls on September 13, or three days before the primary, but the advice is to enroll by September 2 in cities, as the proximity of the third registration day to the primary day may cause delays in getting enrollment data to the election boards and result in confusion and even prevention of voting.

Men who do not enroll can vote who is not registered can vote at any primary.

COUPLE WEDDED AT HIGH NOON

At the First Christian church Sunday at noon the marriage of Miss Isabel Marie Wilson, of Charleroi and Roland Graham Todd, of Steubenville, Ohio, occurred. The affair was marked with simplicity, and only the necessary witnesses were present, as Rev. H. C. Bobbitt, former pastor of the church said the words uniting the couple.

In the afternoon the young couple left on a brief wedding journey after which they will go to Steubenville, where they will live. Miss Wilson was graduated in June from St. Xavier's Academy at Beatty, being one of the first honor students. Her husband is a Geneva College man.

Mr. Todd has been employed at the Phillips Sheet and Tin Plate mill at Steubenville as shipping clerk, holding a responsible position. He is well known in this vicinity, having visited here frequently. Miss Wilson is popular socially and is one of the local leaders in social affairs. She has been a member of the choir of the Charleroi church, and having a beautiful and well cultivated voice, has been paid marked compliments for her singing.

Miss Clara Pearson left Saturday for a visit with friends at Washington.

CHARLEROI WINS FROM BRUSHTON A. C. WITH EASE

With big Jake Smith in the box, Charleroi had a comparatively easy time winning their game from the Brushton A. C. Saturday afternoon on the local field by the score of 6 to 3. "Big Jake" allowed no tampering with his delivery, permitting the Brushtonites to brush out but five brushy hits. Meanwhile what the Independents of Charleroi did to two pitchers was awful. In all they hammered out 16 hits, some of them being lallapaloosers of the extreme type. In fact there was something of every variety from kiting, screaming three baggers, to piping, singles and sizzling home runs.

Charleroi scored two runs on three hits in the first. In the fourth two more players crossed the home pan on two hits, and in the seventh and eighth innings there was a run scored.

BARN BURNS TO GROUND

In a fire, supposedly of incendiary origin, the barn on the James Bristol farm about one and one-half miles from Harts Mills on the Amity road was totally destroyed between 1 and 2 o'clock Sunday morning. The barn was considered one of the best in the county and the loss on the building and contents is estimated at $5,000 with some little insurance.

Members of the Bristol household were awakened early by the reflection from the burning structure. They hastened out but the flames had made such progress that nothing could be done to save the building. The only thing rescued from the doomed structure was a set of work harness and this harness, cut into fragments, indicated the origin of the blaze.

The theory prevails that some vandal entered the barn and cut the work harness to pieces. While thus engaged it is supposed the unknown dropped a lighted match thus setting fire to the barn.

The barn contained all this year's crops including oats and wheat in sheaf and hay, all of last year's wheat crop in the barns, much old oats, all the farming machinery including a new binder, two buggies and two clips of wool. All of this went up in smoke.

The building was 50x70 feet and was regarded as one of the best built and most conveniently arranged barns in the county.
